There were, as far as one could judge, two regiments of infantry, nearly all on the right of the road, as we drove up; there was a body of cavalry on the crest of the hill, and, as presently became evident, a force in the wood. Mounted police kept the line: troops excepted, nobody allowed on any part of the ground. He is a terror to his own soldiers, whatever he may prove to be to the foe.

In the next hour we saw a battle; acted from beginning to end with a sense of reality and seriousness which the theatre never gives you and no written account can express. If it was not on a great scale, it was perfect in each particular and a spectacle of extreme beauty. Selcom is it in actual war that any one beholder or actor can grasp the whole scene, but here the whole was as plainly visible as if, in truth, it were a performance on a stage. They were no puppets nor marionettes, but real inen; no amateurs either, or militia or mere show troops, which one often has to call the English; but an integral portion of the most tremendous military force in the world, with the prestige of victory on its banners. Under the scrutiny of those piercing imperial eyes, no man dared to do his duty less seriously than if the contest were real; it was real to him; to the officers shove all. Everything was transacted with the utmost energy and precision of which the trained German soldier is capable. The business they were set to do presently became plain even to the eye of the civilian. The wood on the left was held by a defending force; invisible to us or to the attacking troops. The battalions massed on the far side of the road were to carry it if they could. It was beautiful to see them set out upon this little campaign. The compact masses of soldiery slowly shook themselves into open order. The squares and columns formed into line; duly distributed into advance guard, main body, and reserves. A company of skirmishers broke suddenly loose from the front, seattered, ran forward, fired, and dropped on the ground. At first they attracted no attention from the enemy, who, on his part, kept fast to his wood, half a mile away. They sprang up after a minute and ran forward again, followed at a distance by the advance guard whom in turn the main body followed; the reserves standing fast. When this movement was perceived from the wood, volleys broke forth, and the assailants dropped again, when they had delivered their volley in reply. There was something uncanny and incomprehensible about the whole proceeding. From both wood and open field came crash after crash of etry and no smoke; they were firing with the new smokeless powder. It was quite evident at once that smokeless powder has its drawbacks as well as advantages. You see better, but you are, also seen better. The attacking body on a ground which afforded no cover whatever was As,—a target which spread over a great space, blaze of sunlight, in which glittered a thould spikes on a thousand helmets, and every button and steel scabbard and buckle and ulette was a target by itself. THE STATUS OF SILVER IN INDIA.

ro the Editor of The Tribune. eir: The action of India in stopping free silver colnage, or more correctly, colnage of silver for private account, is a step toward bringing silver into the proper relation with gold. It is reported that India proposes to issue rupces coined for Government proposes to issue rapec and account in exchange for gold at the rate of 16d. If such is the plan, the demand for silver from India will not necessarily be decreased. By the change the Gover ment practically guarantees the value of silver to the people at 92 cents an ounce, and accordingly issues the rupee at the ratio of 22 to 1, and practically accepts the plan now in practice in the United States of issuing silver on the Government credit, except that India issues the silver at the ratio of 22 to 1, while we issue it at 16 to 1. STOPPAGE OF FREE COINAGE IN INDIA.

THE SILVER DOCTRINAIRES' LAST PROP GONE From The Philadelphia Ledger.

The action of the Indian Government in stopping the colnage of silver knocks the last prop from under the tottering structure of the silver doctrinaires, and leaves nothing to be done but the abandonment of their ruinous silver policy as it, is to be found in the Sherman act.

DANGER OF A SILVER CATACLYSM. From The Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

The United States is how the only Governmen in the market for silver, and unless measures are taken to quickly prevent, there will be a silve cataclyfor. The immediate repeal of the Sherma act and the lessening of the difference between the silver and gold dollar by the increasing of the amount of silver in a dollar, will be the only mean of doing it.

THE BURDEN CAN NO LONGER BE CARRIED. From The Abany Argus.

From The Abany Argus.

Evidently the United States must stop compulsory silver purchases. The burden which we have hitherto with difficulty borne even with the assistance of India's great annual consumption of silver, cannot be carried any longer. The Government holdings of silver have already deprectated enormously on our hands, and ordinary prudence dictates that there be no further additions to them. The repeal of the Act of 1850 is now more than ever inevitable.

THE EXAMPLE OF INDIA SHOULD NOT BE LOST.

THE EXAMPLE OF INDIA SHOULD NOT BE LOST. From The Charleston News and Courier.

It is not likely, however, that the coinage of silver will be carried to any such extent in this country as in India. A special session of Congress will be held this fall, one of the chief objects of which will be to amend our financial legislation. The example of India is not likely to be lost upon that body, and we may reasonably expect it to call an immediate halt in the manufacture of cheap money. WILL THE PRESIDENT HEED THE DEMAND From The Boston Journal.

This new silver crisis will doubtless add intensity

This new silver crisis will doubtless add intensity to the demand upon the President to immediately convene Tongress, but whether he will heed this demand, or whether if he did the Democratic majority in Congress could be cenxed, cajoled or compelled to give the needed relief are points concerning which one cannot feel sanguine. TOO GREAT A TASK FOR THIS COUNTRY ALONE.

Several men in addition to those named were slightly injured.

OBITUARY.

FREDERICK G. VAN PELT.

San Francisco, June 28.—Frederick G. Van Pelt, son of G. S. Van Pelt, a jurist of New-York, died yesterday from having taken thirty-eight ounces of chloroform. He had been addicted to the use of chloroform as an intoxicant.

A dispatch announcing the death of Frederick G. Van Peit in san Francisco on Tuesday was received by his parents at their home, No. 123 East Sixty-ninth-st., yesterday morning. No particulars were given, and up to last evening a relative of the family said they had received no news from San Francisco other than that gained from the flewspapers. The death was a great blow to Mr. and Mrs. Van Pelt. Two weeks ago their son, who for four years has lived in California, made a short visit to this city. He seemed to be in the best of health and spoke of his prospects as unusually bright. He was shortly to come into a large inheritance. At the time of his death it is not known that he was in business. Ho had beep employed in the office of Sheriff Jennings, of had been employed in the office of Sheriff Jennings, or santa Clara County, but Jennings's fallure to be re-elected at the last election had thrown Van Pelt out of his place. The parents say that their son was not addicted to the use of chloroform. He filld been suffering for two months from a sore heel. The detors had given him chloroform to ease the pain. Frederick G. Van Pelt was twenty-seven years old. His father is Gilbert S. Van Pelt, a retired lawyer of this city. Young Mr. Van Pelt was married and had one child. He will be buried in the West.

EDWARD G. AIKMAN. Horace Holden, of No. 72 William-st., yesterday re ceived a dispatch from Detroit, Mich., announcing the sudden death there on Tuesday of Edward G. Alk-man, a general commission merchant, doing business at No. 31 Cedar-st., this city. Mr. Alkman left here ten days ago for Detroit to attend the wedding of a relative, and was then in good health. The particu-

NOTES OF THE STAGE

Oscar Hammerstein has decided to clear the Manhettan Opera House two weeks hence and to reopen it with the present attraction about the middle of August. The comic opera "The Talisman" and the ballet "Versailles" are costly productions, and nothing would probably be gained by running them through the hot weather.

The souvenir book of gems for the fiftiet; performance of "1492" at Paimer's Theatre on Saturday evening is designed by Edward E. Rice. The company will take a vacation until August 14.
